As a retail worker with a large retail chain, these public holiday trading hours being attacked is ridiculous!

Anyone who works retail uses this time off to connect with family, or their partner as I do. With my wife working mornings in retail, and myself working nights we usually get 2 full days together per fortnight. And now with these attempted attacks on restricted trading hours, you want to take the extra few days a year off us too??!!!!

The use of "customers" as a reason to do this is pure money grabbing by investors! Anybody with half a brain can shop before or after a public holiday, the same as I have to. And there are plenty of smaller shops around that sell milk, bread etc for emergencies.

You talk about the rights of the consumer... Are you forgetting that this attacks the rights of the worker? Or does this no longer matter?
