Any attempt to charge a toll on all roads in Australia would be a repugnant law and should not be even under consideration. To think that this country could wish to bring its own people into further hardship and poverty, is unthinkable. We, the citizens of Australia are sick and tired of being robbed by our government by the failed policies and ill conceived ideologies that have taken place over the past 40 years. We now have a severe shortage of housing, a public transport system that could not even match that of the 1950's, we pay far too much for fuel, and rent and mortgages are taking the bulk of our income. Then we have a tax rate where a third is given back to government for the hard working pay-as-you go workers, while the elite pay no tax at all. When we find that Joseph in Egypt only charged the people 20% of their income when a 7 year droug! ht was ap proaching, we wonder how it is that our "lucky country" has to pay so much tax (Genesis 47:26) when the CEO's of private companies give themselves obscene bonuses, making the rest of us sick to the stomach.

Something is very wrong somewhere, and it will only be made worse with a toll on all roads. Unthinkable and unacceptable, especially when viewed under Section 92 of our Constitution of the Commonwealth of Australia, considering that all trucks are using the roads and paying enough already, as we all are.
